HOW TO LIE ONLINE

WHAT? YOU'VE NEVER DONE IT?

CNN

We're all big fat liars. Most of us spit out one or two intentional deceptions a day, and in a week we BS about 30 percent of those with whom we talk to one-on-one, according to old but seminal research from the University of Virginia.

Here's the rub: Those stats are from 1996, back when, beyond some basic e-mailing and AOL chat room chatter, the majority of our interactions happened in real life.

If you didn't feel like going on date No. 2 with that nice but boring dude who couldn't stop talking about his ficuses, or would in reality rather stick your pinkie in a meat grinder than attend your roommate's French horn recital, all you needed was a quick one-time fib and you were in the clear.

Nowadays, you whip up a fabrication about your head cold, and within hours you've been tagged in three Facebook pictures gulping from a beer bong.

So, the Web is making us all a bit more honest, right? Not quite: The UVA research found people were less honest over the phone than in person, probably because it's easier to lie into a phone than to someone's face. With texts, GChats, Facebook messages and the like taking over as the communication methods of choice, it's not hard to imagine online lies running rampant.

But here's the truly disturbing part: This spring, a new study reported that people tell 50 percent more lies via e-mail than in written letters. So it's not a written-vs.-spoken thing.

Bottom line: The net's making it both easier to lie and easier to get caught. Read on for a few tips on using the Web without getting tangled in your own web of deception.

1. Be vague.

Complex excuses sound made up, and the more intricate your story, the more likely you are to mess it up in a later retelling.

2. Tell relevant cohorts about the attempted sham.

If you blew off someone's birthday for a late-night, last-minute, half-naked rooftop dance party (who can blame you?), you'll need to make said partially dressed partyers your unwitting accomplices.

3. Become besties with your privacy settings.

Evidence of your fib will emerge on one of your social networking streams. Your goal is to keep it contained until enough time's passed that no one will notice the incongruity between your stated plans and actual shenanigans.

4. ... or just tell the truth.

This all sounds mad complicated, exhausting and generally counter to the fun-ness you're trying to weasel your way into, right? Much of the time lying just ain't worth it. Apologize in advance for missing your friend's happy hour, and ask if you can make it up to her next week. Request a personal day instead of calling in with a put-on chest cough. Just do it.

TECH WATCH

SPEAKING OF ONLINE STUFF...

Foursquare outage explained

Foursquare's Monday outage happened after staff tried to fix one problem and somehow triggered another. Then another glitch hit Tuesday, just hours after they were up and running again. Monday's glitch was caused when one of the app's servers was noticed storing too much data. When the support team went to fix in, all the other servers went down. The company's official blog said Foursquare is working with the company that makes the system that runs their servers. It also said changes are planned in the coming weeks and that the New York-based startup will communicate problems to users better in the future.

Facebook's 3 new features

Facebook unveiled three new features Wednesday to give users tools for communicating with sheltered groups of people and increased control over the information they share on the social network. One new feature, called Groups, allows users to target their updates to specific sets of friends who they want to communicate with. Another new application, called Download Your Information, allows users to export all the personal information they upload to Facebook to a file on their computer. Facebook also introduced Dashboard, which gives users the ability to see all the apps they use on one page. CNN

Nice to meet you again and again

About five years ago I met a guy at the gym whom I will call "Victor." Victor and I would run into each other around town two or three times a month and chat for a few minutes. Usually my partner, Brad, was with me, and every time Victor would say to Brad, "I don't believe we've met," and introduce himself. The first few times it was understandable because they saw each other much less frequently, but after about the 10th time it became annoying.

"Am I that unmemorable that he can't even recall having met me before?" Brad would ask.

I suggested that maybe Victor has retrograde amnesia like the guy in "Memento," or has his brain erased each week like in the TV show "Dollhouse," or he secretly wants me and was subconsciously removing Brad from his mind. All those theories were far more interesting than the probable answer: Victor just didn't care enough to remember.

What is it with forgetting names and faces? Unless you have a photographic memory, once you tangentially meet someone you might not be able to remember their name weeks or months later. But to forget someone again and again and again each time you see them, well ... that's just rude.

I admit I am guilty of it on occasion, but usually I know we've met before. It can be tough to remember someone's name, especially if you associate that person with a specific place. Like seeing that friendly barista not behind the counter at Starbucks but instead walking toward you on the train platform. You can't place them outside of their usual context at first and it can be disconcerting until you do remember—usually at 3 a.m., causing you to sit upright in bed and yell, "Her name is Sierra and she works at Nookies! That's how I know her!" Meanwhile, you've scared the crap out of your sleeping cats and neighbors.

This problem gets especially embarrassing when you meet someone, forget his name and then keep running into him fairly often. For example, I see the same guy around the neighborhood at least twice a week and I never can remember his name. At some point I decided it's Paul, but now I'm sure that's wrong. The problem is that it's too late to say, "What is your name again?" And since I dubbed him "Paul" in my mind, that is what stuck. I now have an echo in my head when I see him that repeats, "Not Paul. Not Paul."

The point is that while I might not always remember someone's name, I definitely remember his existence. Unlike Victor, who after countless introductions still looks at Brad like he just moved to town. At this point we almost look forward to his reintroductions and decided to make a drinking game out of it. Every time he says "Nice to meet you," we take a shot.

Although, now that I think about it, alcohol isn't going to help me remember anything.

MSI chooses houseguest

Chicago Tribune

Curious onlookers peeked into Kate McGroarty's glass-walled home office as she tried out her new digs for the first time. But the observers didn't bother the 24-year-old.

"Welcome to my home," McGroarty said, beaming.

Online voters chose McGroarty, a Minnesota native who lives on the North Side, as the winner of the Museum of Science and Industry's Month at the Museum contest.

That means the bubbly writer, drama teacher and customer service representative will spend 30 days living inside the Hyde Park museum as part of a live experiment and exhibit. She'll get to roam freely throughout the 26-acre museum campus — interacting with museum patrons and blogging about the experience along the way, museum officials said.

"The only limit is her creativity, and she's got a lot of creativity," said Rob Gallas, the museum's vice president and chief marketing officer.

McGroarty said she hasn't decided what she plans to do when she moves into her new home, but it likely includes camping out in the museum's massive U-505 German submarine.

The glass office on the museum's main level will serve as McGroarty's headquarters — she will have private sleeping quarters inside the museum, a spokeswoman said.

But she'll likely never be alone inside the massive building — guards and maintenance workers roam the building after hours, Gallas said.

McGroarty was among five finalists chosen last month by museum officials from about 1,500 entries. She will move in Oct. 20 and move out Nov. 18, taking with her $10,000.

The finalists didn't know who had won when they all showed for the announcement at the museum Wednesday. They found out by conducting a chemistry experiment — only the winner saw a reaction when a cocktail of liquids was mixed in a beaker.

Although that's about the extent of scientific work McGroarty has done recently, it won't affect her ability to interact with the science museum-goers, the Northwestern University grad said.

"What I do is not really that different from what the museum does," she said. "Not everyone I teach wants to be an actor ... not everyone that comes here wants to be a scientist. Our goal is to spark curiosity in people."

Soldier awarded Medal of Honor

Miller

Chicago Tribune WASHINGTON

President Obama awarded the Medal of Honor on Wednesday to Staff Sgt. Robert J. Miller, who died in Afghanistan in 2008 after exposing himself to enemy fire and saving the lives of more than 20 U.S. and Afghan troops.

Obama presented the award — the nation's highest military recognition — to Miller's parents during a somber ceremony in the East Room of the White House. More than 100 of Miller's friends and family attended the ceremony.

"You gave your oldest son to America, and America is forever in your debt," Obama told Miller's parents, Phil and Maureen Miller.

The 24-year-old Green Beret was raised in Wheaton and "born to lead," Obama said. Miller earned two Army Commendation Medals during his first tour in Afghanistan, Obama said at the ceremony.

"It has been said that courage is not simply one of the virtues, but the form of every virtue at the testing point," Obama said at the ceremony. "For Rob Miller that testing point came three years ago, deep in a snowy Afghan valley."

During his second tour in Afghanistan, Miller was serving in the Special Forces when he volunteered to lead a small nighttime patrol to a remote area in northwest Afghanistan, near the Pakistan border. The patrol was assigned to gather information about a compound that had been destroyed by insurgents.

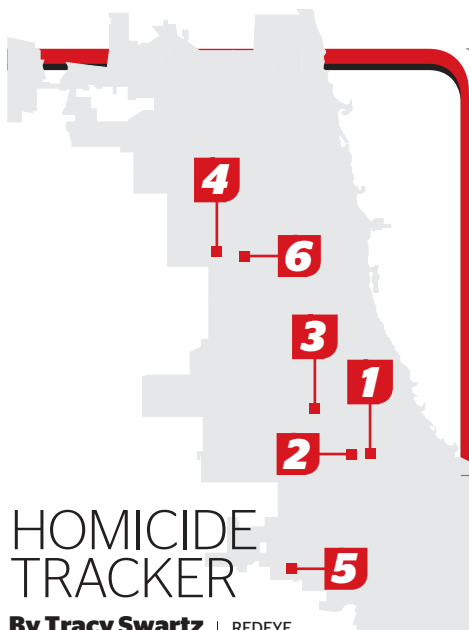

Just before dawn Jan. 25, 2008, 150 Taliban insurgents ambushed the patrol. As the insurgents closed in, the soldiers were overwhelmed by gunfire and rocket-propelled grenades. Miller ordered his team to fall back, Obama said.

Miller charged toward the insurgents, directing gunfire away from his comrades and allowing them to get to safety.

"And then, over the radio, they heard his voice," Obama said. "He had been hit."

“There is nothing imminent. There are a number of things that need to happen in this district that I intend to see through.”

— Chicago Public Schools chief Ron Huberman, saying Wednesday he had no specific timeline for when he would leave his $230,000-a-year job. He was responding to an article in the Chicago Sun-Times saying he intends to leave long before Mayor Daley does in mid-May.

HOMICIDE TRACKER

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Three male teenagers were shot to death in separate South Side incidents in the past week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

A 17-year-old boy was fatally shot Tuesday in the 1600 block of West Montvale Avenue in Morgan Park, police said. On Sept. 30, a 15-year-old boy was fatally shot in the 7200 block of South Hermitage Avenue in West Englewood and an 18-year-old man was shot to death in the 7900 block of South Cottage Grove Avenue in Chatham, officials said.

Sixty-six teenagers have been killed in homicides this year, RedEye determined. Nearly one in five of the city's 353 homicide victims this year were teenagers, RedEye found.

Citywide, fatal shootings also occurred in Austin, Greater Grand Crossing and West Garfield Park in the past week, officials said.

September ended last week with 30 homicides, down from 40 homicides last year, RedEye determined.

Three homicides have been recorded so far this month, according to data. Police recorded 36 homicides in October 2009, RedEye found. TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM

Fire personnel work the scene where a small plane crashed into an XSport Fitness facility in Naperville. mcr

2 injured in plane crash

Chicago Tribune

A man and a woman in their 60s were pulled from a small plane that crashed into the roof of a sports fitness facility in Naperville on Wednesday morning.

The pilot, Lloyd McKee, 66, and his wife, Maureen McKee, 63, suffered bone fractures and lacerations but were conscious and alert at a hospital, a spokesman said.

The plane was taking off from a small airstrip just south of an XSport Fitness facility shortly after noon when it struck a raised tower on the southwest corner of the building, according to the Federal Aviation Administration and aerial footage from the scene.

There was no explosion or fire, according to witnesses, and firefighters were able to remove the two from the plane and take them down a ladder. About 280 people were in the building, but no one inside was injured and it was safely evacuated, officials said.

The pilot and passenger were taken to Edward Hospital in Naperville, where a spokesman said they were conscious and alert.

Dr. Tom Scaletta, medical director of Edward's emergency room, said the injuries the McKees sustained were consistent with a "serious collision" and compared it to a serious car crash. They could be released in two days, he said.

Scaletta said there was no immediate indication of brain injury, but in with a "car or airplane crash we always have that concern."

"Obviously it could have killed them both on impact," he said. "It's hard to say exactly how they'll recover. When we say serious [injury], we mean serious. They're still in the testing stage."

'L' stop to be renamed to honor Washington

Chicago Tribune

A downtown "L" station will be renamed in honor of the late Mayor Harold Washington. The CTA board voted Wednesday to change the name of the Library-State/Van Buren rail station to the Harold Washington Library-State/Van Buren station.

The move follows an informal campaign by several residents who have appeared before the CTA board during the past several years to urge the change.

The rail station is outside the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. The station opened 19 years ago.

Near North Side resident George Blakemore, 68, who addressed the CTA board last month advocating the name change, said Wednesday that the election of Washington, the city's first African-American mayor, is "a part of black history and Chicago history."

Washington was mayor from 1983 until his death in 1987.

Blakemore credited God and his own tenacity, as well as Mayor Daley "for seeing the need to rename the station."

Police mistreatment suit settled

A federal judge signed off Wednesday on a $16.5 million settlement between the City of Chicago and tens of thousands of people who claim they were mistreated by Chicago police while being held as suspects in crimes.

Daley slams real estate groups

Mayor Daley on Wednesday angrily rebuked real estate groups that he said helped stop his plan to protect renters whose buildings are converted to condominiums. The mayor's renter protection proposal failed to get a vote from the City Council.

Search for shooting suspect continues

More than 400 tips came in Wednesday as authorities conducted an intensive manhunt for a gunman suspected of killing one man and wounding three others in a two-state rural shooting rampage south of Chicago.

Europe on edge

Kimchi shortage

5 A spike in napa cabbage prices has South Koreans sweating over their national side dish, kimchi. Many Koreans eat the spicy fermented cabbage dish every day, and a weather-driven crop shortage has forced them to cut back or pay much more.

Court troubled by protests

6 WASHINGTON Despite free-speech concerns, the Supreme Court justices sounded sympathetic Wednesday to a lawsuit filed by the father of a Marine killed in Iraq whose funeral was picketed by protesters with signs like "Thank God for IEDs."

The justices seemed inclined to set a limit to freedom of speech when ordinary citizens are targeted with especially personal and hurtful attacks. The First Amendment says the government may not restrict free speech, but it is less clear when it also shields speakers from private lawsuits.

The Phelps family from Topeka, Kan., has picketed at military funerals across the nation and said God is punishing America and its soldiers because of its tolerance for homosexuality.

In 2006 they traveled to Maryland, where they held anti-war and anti-gay signs at the funeral of Matthew Snyder, and they also put on their website a message that accused his father, Albert Snyder, of having raised his son "to defy the Creator" and "serve the devil."

A Maryland court awarded Snyder $5 million in damages, but the award was thrown out on free-speech grounds.

It will be several months before the court rules in Snyder v. Phelps.

Cable networks make the news

Competing TV news networks CNN and Fox News both made headlines this week.

Rick Sanchez, the anchor who was fired by CNN last week for insulting "Daily Show" host Jon Stewart and ranting about Jewish control of TV networks, issued a statement Wednesday saying he had apologized to Stewart and never should have made the comments, USA Today reported.

AT FOX NEWS

The price tag: a whopping $100,000 per unit. The hosts later realized they had inaccurate information and corrected themselves on air.

JONATHAN TOEWS PLAYS IT COOL AS BLACKHAWKS SET OFF TO DEFEND STANLEY CUP

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Two weeks after winning the Stanley Cup in June, Jonathan Toews jet-setted to Canada where he met "Jersey Shore's" Snooki backstage at the MuchMusic Video Awards.

She flirted, and he played along, even letting her squeeze his biceps. She asked him if he followed the "Gym Tan Laundry" routine like the guys on the show. "I do, of course, since it's cool now, thanks to you guys," he jokingly responded.

It was a rare glimpse into Toews' not-so-serious, off-the-ice life.

Fans know the 22-year-old as a quiet team leader, the model pro athlete, the face of the Blackhawks and the third-youngest captain in NHL history.

Although some fans call him Captain Serious, the moniker bugs Toews.

"I am a serious guy and very goal-driven, but obviously some people think that's all there is to me, which is kind of sad," Toews told RedEye after practice last week. "It's just an annoying nickname. I don't like it. ... It just doesn't sound fun."

So, who is the Jonathan Toews most fans don't know? It's difficult to get him to answer that question. He's a modest and seemingly private and guarded person.

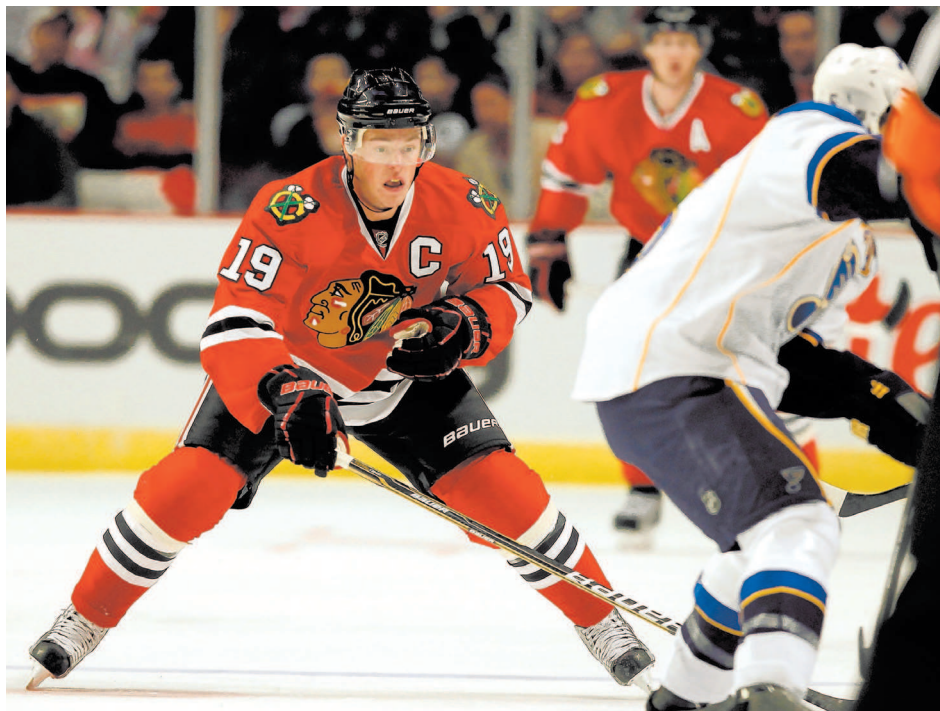

"I am just a normal guy," Toews said. "I'm enjoying big-city life in Chicago. ... I'm a pretty simple guy for the most part. I love to play hockey."

In the hockey world, he's not what you'd call normal. This year, he reached the pinnacle of his career with an Olympic gold medal, a Stanley Cup title and the Conn Smythe trophy as playoff MVP.

Regarded as one of the premier players in the NHL, his name already has surfaced as a potential contender for the league's MVP. He'll begin a quest to claim that honor—along with defending the Stanley Cup—in the season opener Thursday.

But the attention heaped on him after winning the Cup, like riding by himself in his own parade in his native Canada, seems to make him uncomfortable. "I'm not used to that," he said. "I'm not a big showoff."

And that's what some fans like about him.

"He doesn't take the glory. He's just a humble player, and you gotta respect that," said Natalie Zaczek, 26, of Plainfield.

When he's having fun, Toews has been known to party at clubs such as Underground, like he did days after winning the Cup. He dresses up for Halloween (last year's costume with ex-teammate Adam Burish was the duo from "Dumb and Dumber").

And he has teamed up with Kane to play pranks on Burish and Patrick Sharp while on the road. One joke featured a garbage can full of water that spilled on his teammates when they opened their hotel room door.

Off the ice at the University of North Dakota, Toews would go fishing, watch TV and chill with friends, said Chay Genoway, who played hockey with Toews in high school and for a year in college.

"Away from the rink, he's just a normal guy, fun to hang around with and fun to be around," Genoway said.

These days, Toews likes to play video games on his PSP and "Mario Kart" on Wii. He also shoots pool and plays pingpong.

"He wants to win at everything. So if you're doing any kind of competition, he's going to get mad if he's not going to win," teammate

Brian Campbell said.

Toews also pokes fun at Kane, particularly for the mullet he grew during the playoffs.

"We're kind of going down the same path, and we've been together in that kind of respect since Day 1. It's cool to have someone along there with you, keeping you straight, especially for him I guess for the most part," Toews said.

If Kane had to pick a word to describe Toews, it would be mature.

"It seems like he's 27, 28 years old in the locker room. He's really only 22. He's mature beyond his years where sometimes it makes me look like the little kid. ... Sometimes he makes me look bad," Kane said.

Toews isn't a saint, though. In college, he was busted for underage drinking. Nor is he as serious as everybody thinks. Toews can be easygoing yet easy to rile up, Kane said.

At North Dakota, Toews had no nickname.

"When he was here, he was Johnny to his teammates. He's ultra-competitive and extremely well-prepared," said Dave Hakstol, his college hockey coach. "His loyalty amongst his close friends and teammates from his days here is impressive, and he's continued those relationships, and I think that speaks volumes about a young man."

Despite his age, older teammates respect him.

"It's tough to fathom him being that age and having it together like he does," said goalie Marty Turco, 35.

Eddie Olczyk, a former Hawks player and current TV analyst for the Hawks on Comcast SportsNet, said Toews is a talented player and a down-to-earth guy with a sense of humor.

"He is very soft-spoken. He knows he has a job to do. He's going to tell you what he thinks or sees. He's not going to give you a lot, that's just him," he said.

"He's so intense, and he's a competitor, and he wants to win all the time."

What better way to celebrate the Blackhawks' return than spending it with these five? No, really, tell us. redeye.chicago.com/5on5

1 Make a prediction for tonight's Blackhawks opener.	In a pregame ceremony, each member of the Hawks will receive one of Duncan Keith's teeth.	Good guys 57, bad guys O. Ditka 105.	Casual fans everywhere will yell "Niemi says no!" after a Marty Turco save.	The cheers will be muted by boos the instant the other team scores. Gotta love Chicago fans.	'96 champs reunite. Hi, Joe Sakic!
2 What's a better nickname than "Captain Serious" for Jonathan Toews?	Capt. XM Radio.	Major Problem. With corresponding "How I Met Your Mother"-style salute.	After this summer of celebrating? Captain Morgan is probably more appropriate.	Tiny Toews. It would be even better if he gained a few pounds.	Captain Hottie. Did you see him on the cover of Michigan Avenue Magazine?
3 What's your over/under on how many players John Scott flattens this season?	Eleventy.	Five million. And I'd like to bet $5 million on the under.	Over/under 40 opponents hit. Over/under 3 teammates accidentally sat upon.	Over 10, under 50.	All I know at this point is he's 6-foot-8 without skates. That's 1 foot, 4 inches taller than me.
4 How would you protect Jay Cutler's head from another concussion?	This is no laughing matter. Which is why I won't joke about filling his helmet with marshmallows.	Marshmallows and bubble wrap. Add a toothpick and MacGyver could make that a weapon.	Let him wear Staley's head. Lotta padding and eyeholes big enough to see the sacks coming.	Attach a mechanism to his arm that forces him to throw within five seconds.	It might hurt coming off, but Duct Tape works for everything!
5 What did you see in the Bulls preseason opener that you did or did not like?	Watch an NBA exhibition game? I don't understand.	Crumbs on the court. Expect the entire team to trip over them and be out for the season.	More about what I DIDN'T see. Boozer WHYYYY?	The Bulls already started playing? Dislike.	Korver's socks were pulled up so high, that's all I could think about.

Roy, oh, Roy

Roy Halladay made his playoff debut by throwing the second no-hitter in Major League Baseball postseason history as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-0.

Halladay, acquired by the Phillies during the offseason after 12 years with the Toronto Blue Jays, allowed only one base runner—on a fifth-inning walk—at Citizens Bank Park in Philadelphia. Halladay also had a run-scoring single as the Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five National League Division Series.

"It's surreal," Halladay said in a televised interview. "I just wanted to pitch in the postseason. To be able to go out and have a game like that, it's a dream come true."

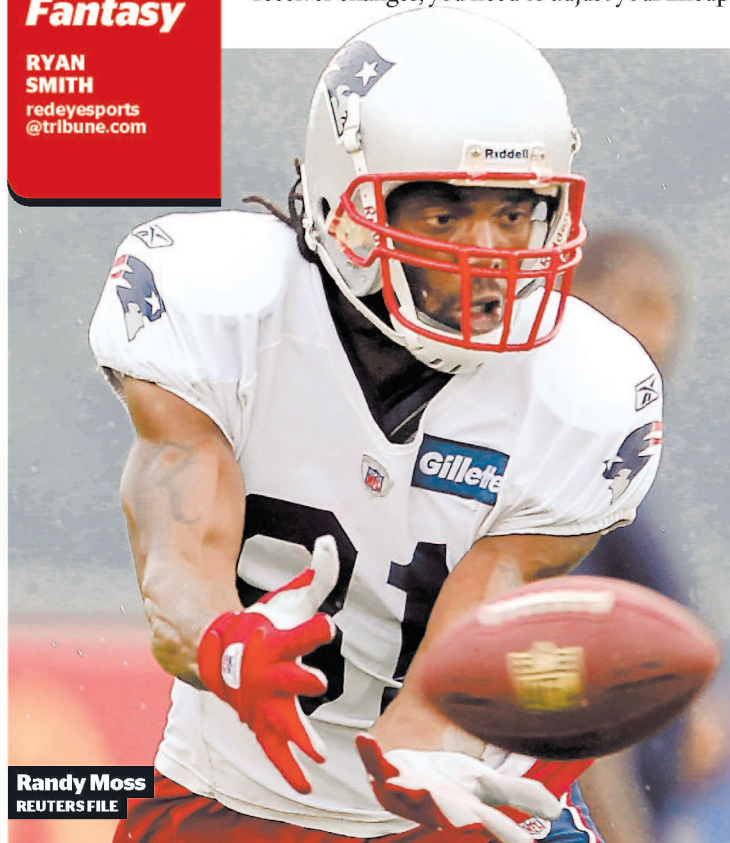

Halladay, 33, pitched almost 2,300 career innings over 346 games before making his first playoff appearance. He joins Don Larsen as the only pitchers to throw a postseason no-hitter. Larsen had a perfect game in the 1956 World Series for the New York Yankees against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Getting Randy

Without a guitarist or a singer providing the melody, a drummer by himself is just a dude banging stuff with sticks. Likewise, the value of wide receivers and tight ends is tied to their quarterbacks. So when the QB who tosses the ball to your fantasy receiver changes, you need to adjust your lineup. D.R. SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

Randy Moss Minnesota

He becomes a clear No. 1 receiver and the first option in Minny for Brett Favre. In New England, he was one of many quality targets.

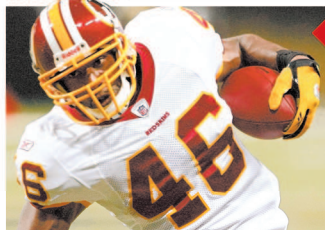

Mohamed Massaquoi, Cleveland: With Jake Delhomme taking back his starting job, Massaquoi should be a much bigger factor and might be worth a waiver pick.

Steve Johnson, Buffalo: Now that Ryan Fitzpatrick is QB, Johnson has caught a touchdown in consecutive games and might be worth a bye week start.

DeSean Jackson, Philadelphia: Michael Vick's out, so the high-flying Jackson is a questionable start until Kevin Kolb proves he can throw more than 5-yard screen passes.

Mike Wallace, Pittsburgh: He's on bye this week, but look for big things from him now that Big Ben is back. He'll be worth starting in all leagues.

CRUSHES

Ryan Torain

Washington running back
Here lies Clinton Portis' fantasy career—R.I.P. Now wipe the tear from your eye and pick up Torain immediately.

Brandon Pettigrew, Detroit tight end: Detroit has at least one more week with limp-armed Shaun Hill at QB, so Pettigrew should see a lot of passes against St. Louis.

C.J. Spiller, Buffalo running back: With Marshawn Lynch traded to the Seahawks, look for the explosive Spiller to get more touches.

CRASHES

Marion Barber

Dallas running back
Jerry Jones said Felix Jones will be a bigger part of the offense, so it's time to downgrade Marion the Barbarian.

Terrell Owens, Cincinnati wide receiver: T.O. had a huge game Sunday, but he's still more sizzle than steak at this point in his career.

Vince Young, Tennessee quarterback: The Cowboys defense looked fearsome against the Texans, and VY might be without favorite target Justin Gage. Don't even think about starting him.

THE BIG ELEVEN

RedEye rounded up fans/alums/students of every Big Ten school to give us their biased look at college football every Thursday during the season. Join their antics on Twitter using the hash tag #red10.

What's homecoming like at your school?

Who would play your team's coach in a Hollywood movie?

 Dana Mortensen Illinois @danamarie26	A few more old people, the bars are more expensive, but better than any weekend at Indiana.	Gary Cole. Straight up twinsies, minus Zook's rugged looks and exceptional coaching abilities.
 Jim Hoff Indiana @jfhoff	Amazing. IU held the first ever homecoming-like event in 1908. Sorry, Illinois. You didn't invent it.	Gene Hackman. He already portrayed a coach leading a championship Indiana team in "Hoosiers."
 Tony Gatz Iowa @tonygatz	Pretty much the same as all other football weekends, with a parade. And more old people in town.	Kevin Costner. He has the stoic look down but could still show emotion when needed.
 Victor H. Soto Michigan @vicsoto	Ahh, homecoming. Alumni come back and reminisce. And try to get college tail.	Denzel Washington. Michigan's never had a black coach, but we need someone to attract the female demo!
 Julie Adamski Michigan State @JulieTheresaE	Like Barleycorn on a Saturday night. Twenty/thirtysomethings trying to get with all the freshmen. Oh, and drinking.	Al Pacino. Italian, rugged good looks and no one dares to mess with you.
 Bekki Chapman Minnesota @bekkijc	There's Homecoming? Maybe when Tubby Smith starts coaching football too.	Tim Brewster is to coaching as Rob Schneider is to acting. But Tubby could get an Oscar!
 Campbell Roth Northwestern @soupgirl	Rich people crowding the North Shore, long lines at Giordano's. Sounds like last Tuesday.	Matthew Fox, though I think "hot movie star" is the only thing missing from Pat Fitzgerald's resume.
 Brad Obermeyer Ohio State @SirBardley	Like most other football weekends: Starts with some kegs and usually ends with a couch burning in the street.	"Mad Men's" John Slattery.
 Ian Patrick Penn State @NittLion78	A bucolic parade scented with the palpable fear we could actually lose to Illinois this Saturday.	The host of "Tales From the Crypt."
 Andrea Bailiff Purdue @acbailiff	We dress up in costumes and start drinking early to obscure the pain of losing.	Joe Tiller after the Atkins diet—he knows the role, but most importantly, he has the mustache.
 Blair Vender Wisconsin @Blender86	If I could only remember ...	Bret Bielema = Rob Riggle. The resemblance is uncanny!

Bartending background

Hornswaggler Arts

Graham Hogan & Joseph Rynkiewicz

Graham: I've been an alcohol enthusiast for longer than I'd like to admit. I also had a brief stint as an occasional bartender at a restaurant in the Loop.

Joseph: My bartending background is limited to the Hornswaggler Bar, but I've been z' the sauce for many years now. More recently, I've been really interested in how to bring savory flavors into a cocktail through affordable ingredients like herbs and teas.

Favorite bars

Joseph: Love the California Clipper for its general vibe. Good people, good drinks. If we wanna dance, we hit up Danny's or the Hideout. I'm partial to Archies for their $5 Hamm's and Jameson combo.

Graham: I have a fondness for The J & M Tap. Something about cop bars really speaks to us.

Through the Liquor Glass

Regina Rauch & Keri Uffelman

Regina: I bartended for a few years in Ukrainian Village [at now-closed Bar Vertigo] and now do party planning downtown. But my interest really started as kid, seeing my parents' liquor cabinet. They had so many interesting spirits. On special occasions, my mom would whip out the blender and make Brandy Alexanders. I've actually been working on an Alexander using bourbon and sweet corn ice cream.

Keri: I have been bartending since 2000. When the cocktail revival trickled down to Chicago, I got a job as a cocktail server at the Violet Hour, where I started becoming interested in making simple syrups, infusing liquors and making drinks with fresh ingredients and craft spirits. I now work and contribute to the seasonal cocktail menu at Nightwood restaurant in Pilsen.

Regina: I like the Rainbo. It's really close to home, the staff is great and the prices are even better.

Keri: I also like the coziness of the Matchbox; they make a great Manhattan and margarita.

Booze duos

Two local mixology teams talk spooky spirits

By Lisa Arnett

Two boozehounds meet in a bar. That's the story behind two local mixology duos, the brains behind drinks served at a handful of cocktail parties, art exhibits and boutique bashes around town.

Regina Rauch and Keri Uffelman, the ladies behind the booze blog Through the Liquor Glass, have designed drinks for friends' cocktail parties. Graham Hogan and Joseph Rynkiewicz are the creative minds behind Hornswaggler Arts, a nonprofit that provides handcrafted cocktails at art events in exchange for donations. They then use the donations to buy a piece of art from the exhibit, which joins others in a collection to be made public one day. We quizzed both pairs on spirits just in time for Halloween season.

Scariest booze

Graham: Warm rail vodka

Joseph: I can't say I'm afraid of any booze but I think Jose Cuervo is a sad excuse for tequila. It tastes like melted plastic.

Regina: Watered-down pilsner
Keri: I still can't get into the peaty smokiness of scotch. Although, there is a new Oregon whiskey out from Ransom called Whippersnapper. It is made with high percentage of malted barley and its flavor reminds me of scotch. Maybe this will be my gateway scotch.

Go-to drink at a bar

Graham: Cheap beer. Whiskey if I'm feeling sassy.

Joseph: Jim Rye on the rocks

Regina: I like to mix it up for my mood, but lately it's been beer or bourbon with bitters.

Keri: Campari and soda

Go-to drink at home

Graham: Bombay gin martini, straight up, super dry, home-made blue cheese olives.

Joseph: If I'm in the mood for a cocktail, I'll have a Perfect Manhattan or Bombay martini; if not I like cabernet sauvignon.

Regina: Lately I've been making a variant of an Old Fashioned with lemon juice, Cointreau and rye whiskey. My favorite cocktail though is the Last Word, which is equal parts gin, lime juice, maraschino liqueur and green chartreuse, shaken.

Keri: I am always experimenting with new drinks and trying them out on my friends. Right now I am working on some pumpkin cocktails.

Halloween party recipe recommendation

Black Gimlet by Hornswaggler Arts

Ingredients:

2 teaspoons fresh lime juice, 1 teaspoon superfine sugar, ice cubes, ¼ cup plus 2 tablespoons gin, ½ tablespoon Chambord raspberry liqueur

Directions: Using the handle of a wooden spoon, lightly muddle the lime juice with the sugar in a martini glass. Fill a shaker with ice, add the gin and Chambord. Shake well, strain and serve.

Satan's Kiss by Regina

Ingredients:

2 ounces gin, 1 ounce lillet blanc, 1 ounce lemon juice, 1 ounce simple syrup, 2 ounces pinot noir

Instructions: Shake gin, lillet, lemon juice and simple syrup and pour into a glass. Float the pinot noir on top to look like blood.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

SEEN ON THE SCENE AT ... Fuze, 2242 N. Lincoln Ave.

We headed out on a chilly Saturday night to check out the early 20s crowd at Fuze, the revamped club in Lincoln Park's former Sky Bar address. BY CRAIG SEYMOUR

Vanessa Mendoza
21, DePaul student

What's your favorite thing to drink?

Corona, baby. My dad used to drink it all the time.

It's pretty cold tonight. Does the cold weather make it harder to go out?

Definitely, it changes your mood. You feel like you want to go out, then all of a sudden, it's cold and you don't want to go out anymore.

What's the best way to look hot in the cold?

Heels. It's all about the shoes, even in the cold.

Tawanda Ngorima
25, medical student

What brings you out tonight?

I heard it was a cool place, nice and relaxed. Good music. A lot of the young, hip crowd of Lincoln Park.

You're very dressed up. Tell me about your look.

It's just my style. It just reflects who I am. It's what I like to wear, and at the same time, I feel like you have to at least put a little bit of effort into your look.

What are you drinking tonight?

Vodka and Red Bull.

Mitch Petty
21, business student

What made you come to Fuze tonight?

[My friends and I] went out on Lake Michigan on a booze cruise, and we heard some good things about Fuze, so we thought we'd come by and check it out.

How do you like it so far?

We got here a little early; it started a little slow. But it's picked up a lot. It's a pretty rowdy night tonight. The dance floor is just ragin'. They've got the girls [dressed in lingerie] up on the stage.

What have you been drinking tonight?

I've had some really good whiskey and Cokes. They're makin' them good.

Curly Shuffle, hootin' & hollerin'

Chicago noisemakers Mr. Russia answered our Chi-Tunes questionnaire in the "about" section at chicagonow.com/chi-tunes. Do the same and your band could appear in RedEye and Metromix!

What makes your live show great?

Sweat-soaked and wild-eyed, head thrown back and cackling. Lucky members of the audience have been assaulted with bass guitar (no charges have been pressed to date). On the occasion of a full moon, the Curly Shuffle (running in a circle while lying on the ground) has been sighted as a highlight in the set.

Describe your sound in five words or less.

Meat Staple Mittens / Bass Rock

Tell us something random about the band, and why that's significant.

Mr. Russia has no guitars; two basses, two keyboards, one drum and a whole lot of hootin' and hollerin'.

Whom would you want to work with, and with whom would you never work? Why?

Todd Rundgren would be amazing to work with because he's kind of a wizard. He's worked with people ranging from XTC to Hall & Oates. We don't want to work with Vampire Weekend.

CHI-TUNES

If the band were a cartoon character, whom would it be and why?

Lindi would be Little Audrey, the rest of the band would probably be "Scooby Doo" villains.

What's the best album you've heard recently?

"Grinderman 2"

What song do you never want to hear again?

Bob Marley and Vampire Weekend

What is Chicago's best music venue and why?

Double Door. Centrally located, ample space, well staffed, good stage, great sound.

!!! Clinic
"Bubblegum"

Domino Records

Clinic burst onto the music scene in 2000 with the Thom Yorke-endorsed "Internal Wrangler," a manic outpouring of nervous youthful energy, twitchy post-punk psychedelia and the helium-fueled exhalations of love-him-or-hate-him singer Ade Blackburn. A decade later, the band's sixth album finds the Liverpool quartet sounding far more comfortable in its own skin. Even Blackburn's keening voice has lost most of its sharper edges with the passing of time.

The group sets the tone with album opener "I'm Aware," a dreamy wash of acoustic guitar,

"ooh ooh" vocals and resting heartbeat bass. "Radiostory" finds Blackburn channeling his inner Jarvis Cocker, delivering a spoken-word monologue atop a mellow stew of haunted melodica and shuffling drums. Indeed, the closest the band gets to its more raucous past is the snarling, guitar-driven "Lion Tamer." Elsewhere, Clinic spins its own twisted version of '60s lounge pop, delivering straightforward love songs ("Baby") alongside more cryptic fare like the gently rocking, fractured art-pop of the album's title track.

SONG

'Na Na Na (Na Na Na Na Na Na Na Na Na Na)'

My Chemical Romance

Upbeat and in-your-face, My Chemical Romance's new single revs up the glam rock and the storytelling ambitions to grab your attention and never let go. "Everybody wants to change the world, but no one wants to die," Gerard Way tantalizingly declares, before a triumphant guitar solo and a barrage of lyrics that make you wonder where they're taking you. It's not clear, but it certainly sounds like a must-take ride. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

DVD

'30 Days of Night: Dark Days'

Available now

Picking up where the 2007 vampire thriller left off, this sequel shifts the action to L.A. as a survivor of the first onslaught (Kiele Sanchez) gets an opportunity to extract revenge on the blood-sucking creatures that destroyed her life. Mia Kirshner also stars. With extras.

Parvesh Cheena
in 'Outsourced'
NBC

TV

'Outsourced'

8:30 p.m. Thursday, NBC

NBC's latest workplace comedy about the employees at a call center in India has taken some flak for being racially insensitive, but star and Chicago-area native Parvesh Cheena—who plays nerdy worker Gupta—doesn't agree with the argument. "This is not a comment [saying] all Indians who work in call centers are dorks. This is about Gupta, played by Parvesh Cheena, who is a big dork. He just is," the actor told RedEye during a recent chat. After seeing the pilot, I raised concerns about the stereotypes. But for the most part, the show only lovingly teases its characters and gives some laughs along the way. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Justin Timberlake

During the 'N Sync days, nobody was sure if JT could sing. In the years since, he's proved himself a vocal powerhouse and a solid actor to boot. He won six Grammys between 2004 and 2008 and has picked up two Emmys for his "Saturday Night Live" spots—including "[Bleep] in a Box." GETTYIMAGESPHOTO

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

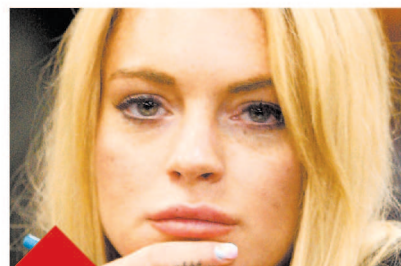

Judging by the buzz surrounding "The Social Network," Justin Timberlake might be nominated for an Oscar for best supporting actor. If he were to win a golden statue, that would bring JT three-quarters of the way to illustrious EGOT status, the capturing of Emmy, Grammy, Academy (Oscar) and Tony awards by a single artist. RedEye checks off the chances of accomplishing the EGOT for Timberlake and other notable entertainers.

Lea Michele

Whether you love or loathe her "Glee" character, Rachel, there's no denying Lea Michele has an incredible voice. She'll definitely line up a Tony and a Grammy during her career, and maybe an Emmy for "Glee." Now all she has to do is win points with the Academy and she's golden.

Lindsay Lohan

LIKELIHOOD

Laugh if you must, but LiLo's a great actress when she's not making stupid life choices. Remember "Freaky Friday"? She also had two albums in the mid-'00s—not to say they were any good. Don't count this train wreck out just yet. REUTERS FILE PHOTO

"If you really want a baby, I'll give you my gift, but I must warn you, I won't be around a lot. Cause I'm EGOTing."

LIKELIHOOD

After her chance at an Oscar nod for "Dreamgirls" was snatched away by the far more likeable Jennifer Hudson, we're sure Beyoncé is itching for EGOT glory. Worry not, she will have her revenge. Or just a lot of failed nominations.

Simply herresistible

James Franco is one handsome woman. The 32-year-old actor appears in full drag on the cover of Candy magazine's fall issue. The publication refers to itself on its website as "the first transversal style magazine ever completely dedicated to celebrating transvestism, transexuality, cross dressing and androgyny, in all its manifestations," according to cbsnews.com.

Whoa, mama

Jessica Alba is embracing her mommy body. "My breasts are saggy, I've got cellulite, my hips are bigger, but I love it," the "Machete" star told the UK edition of GQ, according to people.com. Alba, the mother of 2-year-old Honor, posed for a swimsuit photo spread that accompanied the story.

Christina Hendricks is just beating them off with a stick these days — guys, girls, you name it. "My husband thinks it's so odd that so many women hit on me," the "Mad Men" star tells Harper's Bazaar. Gay men can't get enough either, she says. "They say to me, 'Well, I'm not straight, but if I was ...' I think it's so flattering."

'Dark' side of Transformers

Is Michael Bay channeling Pink Floyd or "Twilight"? "Transformers" fan site tfw2005.com on Wednesday reported it had spotted some upcoming books on amazon.com—since removed from the listings—with the title "Transformers: The Dark of the Moon," but the studio has not commented on a possible title for the third installment of the series that filmed in Chicago during the summer.

THE DIGIT

$10 million

The amount being sought, via online petition, to offer the band Weezer to break up, pitchfork.com reports. Seattle resident James Burns posted his plea on the website thepoint.com, but, as of Wednesday, he hadn't even reached 1 percent of his fundraising goal.
